INTRODUCTION

The Haunted House is pathetically connected with the close of its author's life. It belongs to the period comprised in the final pages of those simple and unaffected Memorials by his son and daughter, which—until, from the pen of the Master of the Temple or some one equally capable, we are furnished with an ampler and a more critical biography—must remain the chief record of Thomas Hood. It was in the May of 1845 that he died ; and The Haunted House was probably composed in the last months of 1843, when he was already a doomed man, though still struggling gallantly, in spite of everything, to carry on his literary pursuits. Already, for several years past, his condition had been more or less critical. He suffered from heart disease, and periodic hæmorrhage of the lungs, combined with minor ailments; all of which, according to his faithful friend and physician, Dr. William Elliot, had been aggravated by the necessity that he should, in all circumstances and "at all times continue his literary labours, being under engagements to complete certain works within a stated period." In the train of insomnia had come its attendant troubles, depression and exhaustion, and these again had increased his malady, "bringing on renewed attacks, and reducing him to such a state that he had been rendered utterly incapable of mental effort." These quotations are from a letter of 1840, but they represent with even more accuracy his condition in 1843. Yet his endurance, his courage, his buoyancy, and his cheerful spirit kept him active almost to the end. Several times during the progress of his last enterprise, his friends, of whom happily he seems to have had no lack, were obliged to make fresh excuses for the absence of his familiar pen. Now and then a little drawing, executed with difficulty in his sick bed, did duty for the defaulting pages of prose or verse ; and many of his later papers were dictated to his wife—that kind and loving nurse who for so brief a space survived her husband—in the intervals of terrible paroxysms of pain. The moment he could return to work he did so, pouring out his “whims and oddities,” scrawling off admirable letters to childish favourites, or drawing up eloquent appeals to those in power on behalf of the poor and the oppressed. And strangely enough, to this period of his life belong not only The Haunted House, but two more of his most successful and enduring poetical efforts, The Song of the Shirt and The Bridge of Sighs.

The Song of the Shirt came out anonymously in the Christmas Number of Punch for 1843, and its instantaneous and extraordinary popularity is matter of history. But The Haunted House and The Bridge of Sighs both appeared in that ill-starred and short-lived serial Hood's Magazine and Comic Miscellany. The three volumes of this are now so rarely to be found, and it is, moreover, so intimately connected with its Editor's final struggle with that "long disease," his life, that before proceeding to the main duty of this "Introduction," it may be worth while to give some account of it. A periodical which, in addition to the beautiful Stanzas—"Farewell, Life! My senses swim," includes, not only two of Hood's best pieces, but half a dozen of

Robert Browning's Dramatic Lyrics and Romances, two or three poems by Keats, a poem and a conversation by Walter Savage Landor, and contributions by Monckton Milnes (Lord Houghton), "Barry Cornwall" (B. W. Procter), the Hon. Mrs. Norton, G. H. Lewes, and G. P. R. James,—to say nothing of a humorous epistle from Charles Dickens,—scarcely deserves to fall into complete oblivion. Its prospectus, which was issued at the end of 1843, was in Hood's best manner, bristling of course with wit and puns, and betraying not the least indication of the writer's miserable state of health. There was to be a total abstinence from the stimulating topics and fermented questions of Politics and Polemics, it said, but "for the Sedate there would be papers of becoming gravity ; and the lover of Poetry would be supplied with numbers in each Number." "It would aim at being merry and wise, instead of merry and otherwise." "A critical eye was to be kept on current Literature,—a regretful one on the Drama, and a kind one on the Fine Arts, from whose Artesian well there would be an occasional drawing."

More than half of the first number, which was published in January with, for those days, considerable success, (1,500 copies being sold), was contributed by Hood himself. The frontispiece was an exceedingly good steel engraving by J. Cousen, after Thomas Creswick,

R.A., of The Haunted House; and it is quite possible that the original picture, which, we are told, was never in Hood's possession, supplied the initial suggestion for the poem it was employed to decorate. There were other verses by the Editor in the first part, which also included a metrical description, by an anonymous hand, of Hogarth's Rake's Progress,—a description scarcely to be described as an improvement on Hoadly's contemporary verses. The start which the magazine obtained was, however, speedily obstructed by the usual financial difficulties. The proprietor turned out to be a man of straw, who had been tempted into the speculation by the Editor's name, but was without sufficient capital to float the enterprise. After changing printers twice, Hood managed to get out the second number, which opened with another of his more serious poems, The Lady's Dream, —the title, by the way, of one of Stothard's water-colour designs in the William Smith Bequest at South Kensington. Hood's Lady's Dream, however, — notable for the couplet,

“ Evil is wrought by want of Thought
As well as want of Heart,”— was illustrated by himself, with some obvious assistance from its engraver, Samuel Williams, and it had also an exceedingly picturesque tail-piece of a “ Church Porch,” the “ scene of Gray's Elegy,” which, from the initials “ F.C.,” was apparently by Creswick. Among Hood's colleagues in this part were Charles Mackay and Mrs. S. C. Hall, the latter of whom had offered to assist out of "veneration to the author of the Song of the Shirt." In No. III. again, the initial poem, The Key: a Moorish Romance, was editorial; but the most ambitious contribution was a blank verse treatment by Mackay of that theme of the death of Pan which, in this same year, Mrs. Browning also handled so supremely.

Other "numbers in the Numbers" that succeeded were by Samuel Lover and the Hon. Mrs. Norton. In Part V., after a Threatening Letter to Thomas Hood from Dickens, came The Bridge of

Sighs and the beginning of the Editor's unfinished novel, Our Family. In the next part Browning arrived to the rescue with The Laboratory and Claret and Tokay, which two latter pieces (supplemented by Beer) figure in his works under the title of Nationality in Drinks. These contributions he afterwards followed up by Garden Fancies, The Boy and the Angel, The Tomb at St Praxed's, and The Flight of the Duchess. Apparently this assistance was procured for the magazine by Milnes, to whose good offices is no doubt also due the song of Old Meg, which Keats was stated to have written during his tour in Scotland in 1818, and which made its first appearance in No VI, heralding one or two other minor pieces from the same pen. But before the first volume was finished, work and worry had again brought Hood to the brink of the grave. "During several days," says an announcement at the end of the number for June, "scars were entertained for his life." But he had rallied, and was recovering, though slowly,—in earnest of which he sent forth from his sick chamber two little sketches bearing unmistakable traces of the disadvantages under which they had been produced. One, Hood's Mag, was a magpie in a hawk's hood; the other, an "arrangement" of blisters, leeches, and physic bottles, symbolised and expressed The Editor's Apologies.

It is needless to describe in detail the contents of the two remaining volumes. Apart from Browning's poems, the most important of the pieces that followed were Landor's Prayer of the Bees for Alciphron, and the dialogue (in prose) between Dante and Beatrice, while in the number for November, 1844, figured a Death of Clytemnestra by Bulwer Lytton, also but recently recovered from illness. Our Family dragged on to its twenty-third chapter ; but with the exception of the Lay of the Labourer and the stanzas beginning "Farewell, Life !" already referred to, nothing else of importance came from the Editor himself. His last prose contribution was a Note from my Note Book, in which he called attention to the curious fact that Collins's Ode to Evening is but one unbroken sentence ; his last metrical effort, a not very remarkable epigram on Lord Brougham. This latter appeared in the March number of Vol. II., the frontispiece to which was the engraving by F. A. Heath (familiar in the old editions of Hood's poems) of his bust by Edward Davis. The same March number announced that he was "more seriously ill than even he had ever been before." In April the hopeless character of his malady was definitely announced. He lingered, however, for a month longer, dying, as he said, "inch by inch," but tranquil, resigned, and affectionate as of old. The end came at last on the 3rd of May, 1845.

It has already been hinted that The Haunted House may have been first prompted by Creswick's picture, for which the artist's name was no doubt the same. Indeed, the motto from Wordsworth prefixed to the poem is just such an one as might be expected in an Exhibition Catalogue. But even if this conjecture be well founded, the result is only to increase one's sense of the extraordinary fertility of fancy which has accumulated around a suggestive title such a succession of images of solitude and decay,—such a brooding horror of ancestral crime and desolation. It is true that to-day the manner of the work is a little in the melodramatic taste of the forties and fifties, but it is not the less ghostly on that account. And in this connection, it may be observed that an acute and accomplished critic of poetry, the poet Mr. Edmund Clarence Stedman, has been careful to notice a certain similarity between Hood's method in verse and some of Dickens's cognate pictures in prose. Mr. Stedman instances, for example, the touch of kinship between the old Hall in The Haunted House and "the shadowy grand-staircase in the Dedlock mansion" or "Mr. Tulkinghorn's chamber [in Lincoln's Inn Fields],—where the Roman points through loneliness and gloom to the dead body on the floor." Dickens had no need to borrow from any one ; but, as we have seen, he had himself contributed to Hood's Magazine, and it may well be that something of its opening verses had lingered in his memory, though there are ten years between them and the publication of Bleak House in 1853. But in recalling Mr. Stedman's attractive pages, we must not forget that the most steadfast admirer of this poem—upon which the sympathetic pencil of Mr. HERBERT RAILTON has here lavished its wealth of ingenious interpretation—was also an American poet and critic. It is to The Haunted House that Edgar Allan Poe devotes the entire final paragraph of his review of Hood. In all probability no more keenly perceptive analyst of this particular effort could be found than the author of The Raven, and for this reason we shall take leave to close this preface by quoting his "appreciation" with a minimum of excision. After saying that he prefers The Haunted House to any composition of its author, he goes on: "It is a masterpiece of its kind—and that kind belongs to a very lofty—if not to the very loftiest order of poetical literature. . . . Not the least merit of the work is its rigorous simplicity. . . . The thesis is one of the truest in all poetry. As a mere thesis it is really difficult to conceive anything better. The strength of the poet is put forth in the invention of traits in keeping with the ideas of crime, abandonment, and ghostly visitation. Every legitimate art is brought in to aid in conveying the intended effects ; and (what is quite remarkable in the case of Hood) nothing discordant is at any point introduced. He has here very little of what we have designated as the fantastic—little which is not strictly harmonious. The metre and rhythm are not only in themselves admirably adapted to the whole design, but, with a true artistic feeling, the poet has preserved a thorough monotone throughout, and renders its effect more impressive by the repetition (gradually increasing in frequency towards the finale) of one of the most pregnant and effective of the stanzas :

‘ O’er all there hung a shadow and a fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted ! ’

Had Hood only written The Haunted House, it would have sufficed to render him immortal."

The Haunted House

The Haunted House

A Romance

Part I

*Some dreams we have are nothing else but dreams,
Unnatural, and full of contradictions ;
Yet others of our most romantic schemes
Are something more than fictions.*

*It might be only on enchanted ground ;
It might be merely by a thought's expansion ;
But, in the spirit or the flesh, I found
An old deserted Mansion.*

The Haunted House

*A residence for woman, child, and man,
A dwelling place,—and yet no habitation ;
A House,—but under some prodigious ban
Of Excommunication.*

*Unhinged the iron gates half open hung,
Farr'd by the gusty gales of many winters,
That from its crumbled pedestal had flung
One marble globe in splinters.*

*No dog was at the threshold, great or small ;
No pigeon on the roof—no household creature—
No cat demurely dozing on the wall—
Not one domestic feature.*

The Haunted House

*No human figure stirr'd, to go or come,
No face looked forth from shut or open casement ;
No chimney smoked—there was no sign of Home
From parapet to basement.*

*With shatter'd panes the grassy court was starr'd :
The time-worn coping-stone had tumbled after !
And thro' the ragged roof the sky shone, barr'd
With naked beam and rafter.*

*O'er all there hung a shadow and a fear ;
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted !*

The Haunted House

*The flow'r grew wild and rankly as the weed,
Roses with thistles struggled for espial,
And vagrant plants of parasitic breed,
Had overgrown the Dial.*

*But gay or gloomy, steaafast or infirm,
No heart was there to heed the hour's duration ;
All times and tides were lost in one long term
Of stagnant desolation.*

*The wren had built within the Porch, she found
Its quiet loneliness so sure and thorough ;
And on the lawn,—within its turfy mound,—
The rabbit made his burrow.*

The Haunted House

*The rabbit wild and grey, that flitted thro'
The shrubby clumps, and frisk'd, and sat, and vanish'd
But leisurely and bold, as if he knew
His enemy was banish'd.*

*The wary crow,—the pheasant from the woods—
Lull'd by the still and everlasting sameness,
Close to the mansion, like domestic broods,
Fed with a "shocking tameness."*

*The coot was swimming in the reedy pond,
Beside the water-hen, so soon affrighted;
And in the weedy moat the heron, fond
Of solitude, alighted.*

The Haunted House

*The moping heron, motionless and stiff,
That on a stone, as silently and stilly,
Stood, an apparent sentinel, as if
To guard the water-lily.*

*No sound was heard except, from far away,
The ringing of the witwall's shrilly laughter,
Or, now and then, the chatter of the jay,
That Echo murmur'd after.*

*But Echo never mock'd the human tongue ;
Some weighty crime that Heaven could not pardon,
A secret curse on that old Building hung
And its deserted Garden.*

The Haunted House

*The beds were all untouch'd by hand or tool ;
No footstep mark'd the damp and mossy gravel,
Each walk as green as is the mantled pool,
For want of Human travel.*

*The vine unpruned, and the neglected peach,
Droop'd from the wall with which they used to grapple ;
And on the kanker'd tree, in easy reach,
Rotted the golden apple.*

*But awfully the truant shunn'd the ground,
The vagrant kept aloof, and daring poacher,
In spite of gaps that thro' the fences round
Invited the encroacher.*

The Haunted House

*For over all there hung a cloud of fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted!*

*The pear and quince lay squander'd on the grass;
The mould was purple with unheeded showers
Of bloomy plums—a Wilderness it was
Of fruits, and weeds, and flowers!*

*The marigold amidst the nettles blew,
The gourd embraced the rose-bush in its ramble;
The thistle and the stock together grew,
The hollyhock and bramble.*

The Haunted House

*The bear-bine with the lilac interlaced,
The sturdy burdock choked its slender neighbour,
The spicy pink. All tokens were effaced
Of human care and labour.*

*The very yew Formality had train'd
To such a rigid pyramidal stature,
For want of trimming had almost regain'd
The raggedness of nature.*

*The Fountain was a-dry—neglect and time
Had marr'd the work of artisan and mason,
And efts and croaking frogs, begot of slime,
Sprawl'd in the ruin'd basin.*

The Haunted House

*The Statue, fallen from its marble base,
Amidst the refuse leaves, and herbage rotten,
Lay like the Idol of some bygone race,
Its name and rites forgotten.*

*On ev'ry side the aspect was the same,
All ruin'd, desolate, forlorn and savage :
No hand or foot within the precinct came
To rectify or ravage.*

*For over all there hung a cloud of fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted !*

The Haunted House

Part II

*O very gloomy is the House of Woe,
Where tears are falling while the bell is knelling,
With all the dark solemnities which show
That Death is in the dwelling.*

*O very, very dreary is the room
Where Love, domestic Love, no longer nestles,
But, smitten by the common stroke of doom,
The Corpse lies on the trestles !*

*But House of Woe, and hearse, and sable pall,
The narrow home of the departed mortal,
Ne'er look'd so gloomy as that Ghostly Hall,
With its deserted portal !*

The Haunted House

*The centipede along the threshold crept,
The cobweb hung across in mazy tangle,
And in its winding sheet the maggot slept,
At every nook and angle.*

*The keyhole lodged the earwig and her brood,
The emmets of the steps had old possession,
And march'd in search of their diurnal food
In undisturb'd procession.*

*As undisturb'd as the prehensile cell
Of moth or maggot, or the spider's tissue,
For never foot upon that threshold fell,
To enter or to issue.*

The Haunted House

*O'er all there hung the shadow of a fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted !*

*Howbeit, the door I push'd—or so I dream'd -
Which slowly, slowly gaped,—the hinges creaking
With such a rusty eloquence, it seem'd
That Time himself was speaking.*

*But Time was dumb within the Mansion old,
Or left his tale to the heraldic banners,
That hung from the corroded walls, and told
Of former men and manners :--*

The Haunted House

*Those tatter'd flags, that with the open'd door,
Seem'd the old wave of battle to remember,
While fallen fragments danced upon the floor,
Like dead leaves in December.*

*The startled bats flew out,—bird after bird,
The screech-owl overhead began to flutter,
And seem'd to mock the cry that she had heard
Some dying victim utter !*

*A shriek that echo'd from the joisted roof,
And up the stair, and further still and further,
Till in some ringing chamber far aloof
It ceased its tale of murther !*

The Haunted House

*Meanwhile the rusty armour rattled round,
The banner shudder'd, and the ragged streamer;
All things the horrid tenor of the sound
Acknowledged with a tremor.*

*The antlers, where the helmet hung, and belt,
Stirr'd as the tempest stirs the forest branches,
Or as the stag had trembled when he felt
The bloodhound at his haunches.*

*The window jingled in its crumbled frame,
And thro' its many gaps of destitution
Dourous moans and hollow sighings came,
Like those of dissolution.*

The Haunted House

*The woodlouse dropp'd, and roll'd into a ball,
Touch'd by some impulse occult or mechanic ;
And nameless beetles ran along the wall
In universal panic.*

*The subtile spider, that from overhead
Hung like a spy on human guilt and error,
Suddenly turn'd and up its slender thread
Ran with a nimble terror.*

*The very stains and fractures on the wall
Assuming features solemn and terrific,
Hinted some Tragedy of that old Hall,
Lock'd up in hieroglyphic.*

The Haunted House

*Some tale that might, perchance, have solved the doubt,
Wherefore amongst those flags so dull and livid,
The banner of the Bloody Hand shone out
So ominously vivid.*

*Some key to that inscrutable appeal,
Which made the very frame of Nature quiver ;
And every thrilling nerve and fibre feel
So ague-like a shiver.*

*For over all there hung a cloud of fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted ;
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted !*

The Haunted House

*If but a rat had linger'd in the house,
To lure the thought into a social channel!
But not a rat remain'd, or tiny mouse,
To squeak behind the panel.*

*Huge drops roll'd down the walls, as if they wept;
And where the cricket used to chirp so shrilly,
The toad was squatting, and the lizard crept
On that damp hearth and chilly.*

*For years no cheerful blaze had sparkled there,
Or glanced on coat of buff or knightly metal;
The slug was crawling on the vacant chair,—
The snail upon the settle.*

The Haunted House

*The floor was redolent of mould and must,
The fungus in the rotten seams had quicken'd ;
While on the oaken table coats of dust
Perennially had thicken'd.*

*No mark of leathern jack or metal can,
No cup—no horn—no hospitable token,—
All social ties between that board and Man
Had long ago been broken.*

*There was so foul a rumour in the air,
The shadow of a presence so atrocious :
No human creature could have feasted there,
Even the most ferocious.*

*For over all there hung a cloud of fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted !*

The Haunted House

Part III

*'Tis hard for human actions to account,
Whether from reason or from impulse only—
But some internal prompting bade me mount
The gloomy stairs and lonely.*

*Those gloomy stairs, so dark, and damp, and cold,
With odours as from bones and relics carnal,
Deprived of right, and consecrated mould,
The chapel vault or charnel*

The Haunted House

*Those dreary stairs, where with the sounding steps
Of ev'ry step so many echoes blended,
The mind, with dark misgivings, feared to guess
How many feet ascended.*

*The tempest with its spoils had drifted in,
Till each unwholesome stone was darkly spotted,
As thickly as the leopard's dappled skin,
With leaves that rankly rotted.*

*The air was thick—and in the upper gloom
The bat—or something in its shape—was winging :
And on the wall, as chilly as a tomb,
The Death's-Head moth was clinging.*

The Haunted House

*That mystic moth, which, with a sense profound
Of all unholy presence, augurs truly ;
And with a grim significance flits round
The taper burning blueely.*

*Such omens in the place there seem'd to be,
At ev'ry crooked turn, or on the landing,
The straining eyeball was prepared to see
Some Apparition standing.*

*For over all there hung a cloud of fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted !*

The Haunted House

*Yet no portentous Shape the sight amazed ;
Each object plain, and tangible, and valid ;
But from their tarnish'd frames dark Figures gazed,
And Faces spectre-pallid.*

*Not merely with the mimic life that lies
Within the compass of Art's simulation ;
Their souls were looking thro' their painted eyes
With awful speculation.*

*On ev'ry lip a speechless horror dwelt ;
On ev'ry brow the burthen of affliction ;
The old Ancestral Spirits knew and felt
The House's malediction.*

The Haunted House

*Such earnest woe their features overcast,
They might have stirr'd, or sigh'd, or wept, or spoken ;
But, save the hollow moaning of the blast,
The stillness was unbroken.*

*No other sound or stir of life was there,
Except my steps in solitary clamber,
From flight to flight, from humid stair to stair,
From chamber into chamber.*

*Deserted rooms of luxury and state,
That old magnificence had richly furnish'd
With pictures, cabinets of ancient date,
And carvings gilt and burnish'd.*

The Haunted House

*Rich hangings, storied by the needle's art
With Scripture history, or classic fable ;
But all had faded, save one ragged part,
Where Cain was slaying Abel.*

*The silent waste of mildew and the moth
Had marr'd the tissue with a partial ravage ;
But undecaying frown'd upon the cloth
Each feature stern and savage.*

*The sky was pale ; the cloud a thing of doubt ;
Some hues were fresh, and some decay'd and duller .
But still the Bloody Hand shone strangely out
With vehemence of colour !*

The Haunted House

*The Bloody Hand that with a lurid stain
Shone on the dusty floor, a dismal token,
Projected from the casement's painted pane,
Where all beside was broken.*

*The Bloody Hand significant of crime,
That glaring on the old heraldic banner,
Had kept its crimson unimpaired by time,
In such a wondrous manner.*

*O'er all there hung the shadow of a fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted!*

The Haunted House

*The Death Watch tick'd behind the panell'd oak,
Inexplicable tremors shook the arras,
And echoes strange and mystical awoke,
The fancy to embarrass.*

*Prophetic hints that fill'd the soul with dread,
But thro' one gloomy entrance pointing mostly,
The while some secret inspiration said,
That Chamber is the Ghostly !*

*Across the door no gossamer festoon
Swung pendulous—no web—no dusty fringes,
No silky chrysalis or white cocoon
About its nooks and hinges.*

The Haunted House

*The spider shunn'd the interdicted room,
The moth, the beetle, and the fly were banish'd,
And where the sunbeam fell athwart the gloom
The very midge had vanish'd.*

*One lonely ray that glanced upon a Bed,
As if with awful aim direct and certain,
To show the Bloody Hand in burning red
Embroidered on the curtain.*

*And yet no gory stain was on the quilt—
The pillow in its place had slowly rotted;
The floor alone retain'd the trace of guilt,
Those boards obscurely spotted.*

The Haunted House

*Obscurely spotted to the door, and thence
With mazy doubles to the grated casement—
Oh what a tale they told of fear intense,
Of horror and amazement!*

*What human creature in the dead of night
Had coursed like hunted hare that cruel distance?
Had sought the door, the window in his flight,
Striving for dear existence?*

*What shrieking Spirit in that bloody room
Its mortal frame had violently quitted?—
Across the sunbeam, with a sudden gloom,

The Haunted House

*Acrofs the sunbeam, and along the wall,
But painted on the air so very dimly,
It hardly veil'd the tapestry at all,
Or portrait frowning grimly.*

*O'er all there hung the shadow of a fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted !*

PARC. I.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE A Romance

CHAPTER I

Some dreams we have are nothing else but dreams,

Unnatural, and full of contradictions,

Yet others of our most romantic schemes

Are something more than fictions.

It might be only on enchanted ground ,

It might be merely by a thought's expansion ,

But , in the spirit or the flesh , I found

An old deserted Mansion

A residence for woman, child, and man,
A dwelling-place, - and yet no habitation;
A House, - but under some prodigious ban,
Of communication.

Unshingled the iron gates half open lying,
Torn'd by the gusty gales of many winters,
That from its crumbled pedestal had slung
The marble globe in splinter

No dog was at the threshold, great or small,
No pigeon on the roof — no household creature —
No cat demurely dozing on the wall —
Not one domestic fowl

Ministered the men
Early half open hawk

No human figure stirr'd to go or come,

No face look'd forth from shut or open casement,

No chimney smok'd — there was no sign of Home

From parapet to bayment

With shatter'd panes the grassy court was stor'd

The time-worn coping-stone had tumbled after

And thro' the ragged roof the sky shone, barr'd

With naked beam and rafter

No chimney smoked -
there was no sign of home.

Quer all thae hvinē a shadow and a fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit doughted,
And said ay plain ay whisper in the ear,
The place is Hunted.

The flower grew wild and rankly as the weed,
Roses with thistles struggled for espial,
And vagrant plants of parasitic breed,
Had overgrown the Dial

For over all these hazy clouds of fire

Bvt Gay or Gloomy, steadfast or infirm,

No heart was there to heed the hour's division,

All times and tides were lost in one long term
Of stagnant desolation

The wren had built within the Berch, she found
Its quiet loneliness so sure and thorough,

And on the lawn, — within its luscious mound, —

The rabbit made his burrow

The wren had built within the perch.

The rabbit wild and free that flitted thro

The shrubby clumps and fished, and sat and vanished

But leisurely and bold as if he knew

His enemy was banish'd

he wary crow the pheasant from the woods -

Lulled by the still and everlasting loneliness,

Close to the mansion like domestic broods

Fed with a "shocking" lameness

The coot was swimming in the reedy pond
Beside the water-hen so soon affrighted;
And in the weedy mood the heron, fond

Of solitude, alighted

The moping heron, motionless and still,
That on a stone, so silently and stilly,
Stood, an apparent sentinel, as if
To guard the water-lily

the moping hen,
and fly

No sound was heard except, from far away,
The ringing of the witwall's shrilly laughter,
Or, now and then, the Chatter of the joy,
That Echo murmur'd after.

A secret curse on that old Building hangs
And its deserted Garden.

Bvt Lcho never mock'd the human tongue,
Some weighty crime, that Heaven could not pardon,
A secret curse on that old Building hung
And its deserted Garden

The beds were all untouch'd by hand or tool,
No footsteps marked the damp and mossy gravel
No walk of green of y^e the mantled pool
No want of human travel.

The vine unpurged, and the neglected
Droop'd from the wall with which they used to creep;
And on the knacker'd tree, in easy reach,
Rotted the golden apple.

But awfully the hunt shunned the ground
The vagrant kept aloof, and daring poacher.
In spite of dogs that thro' the fences leaped
Invited the encroacher

For over all there hung, a cloud of fear
A sense of mystery the spirit dunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear
The place is haunted!

The flower grew wild
and rang as the wind,

The pear and quince lay squander'd on the grass,
The mould was purple with unheeded showers
Of bloomy plums — a Wilderness it was
Of fruits, and weeds, and flowers!

The mouldered amidst the nettles blew
The gourd embraced the rose-bush in its ramble
The thistle and the stock together grew
The holly-hock and bramble

C The best bine with the lilac interloct,
The stately burdock choked its slender neighbour,
The spicy pink All tokens were effect
Of human care and labour

The very few formality had found
To such a rigid pyramidal stature,
For want of humming had, almost
The ruggedness of nature

The building was a day

The Fountain way a day — neglect and time
Had marred the work of artizan and mason,
And eels and croaking frogs begot of slime
Sprowl'd in the ruin'd basin

The Statue fallen from its marble base
Amidst the refuse leaves, and herbage

Lyke the Idol of some bygone

Its name and uses forgotten

On ev'ry side the aspect was the same,
All ruin'd, desolate, forlorn and savage
No hand or foot within the precinct came
To rectify or ravage

The Weedy old

For over all there hung a cloud of fear
A sense of mystery the spirit clannied,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted.

The statue of the Virgin Mary is made of stone

PART II.

PART III.

O very gloomy is the House of Woe,
Where tears are falling while the bell is knelling,
With all the dark solemnities which show
That Death is in the dwelling.

O very very dreary is the room

Where ~~I~~ we domestic Love no longer nestles

But smitten by the common stroke of doom

The Corpse lies on the trestles

But House of Woe, and hearse, and sable pall,
The narrow home of the departed mortal,
Neer look'd so gloomy as that Ghostly Hall,
With its deserted portal

The centipede along the threshold crept,
The cobweb hung across in mazy tangle,
And in its winding sheet the mayfly slept,
All every nook and angle

The keyhole lodged the earwig and her blood,
The emmeys of the steps had sole possession,
And marched in search of their diurnal food
In undisturbed procession

(A) undisturb'd of the prehensile cell.

O' moth or maggot, or the spider's tissue,

For never foot upon that threshold fell,

To enter or to issue.

O'er all there hung the shadow of a fear,

A sense of mystery the spirit doughted,

And said by plain or whisper in the ear.

The place is haunted.

“It never got upon the threshold yet.”

Nowbeit, the doer I push'd — or so I dream'd —
Which slowly, slowly gap'd, — the hinges creaking
With such a rusty eloquence, it seemed
That Time himself was speaking

But Time was dumb within that Tension old
Or left his tale to the heroldic banners,
That hung from the corroded walls, and told
Of former men and mannyer.

Those talked story, that with the open'd door,
Seem'd the old wave of battle to remember,
While fallen fragments danced upon the floor,
Like dead leaves in December

The startled bats flew out, — bird after bird ,
The screech-owl overhead began to flutter,
And seemed to mock the cry that she had heard
Some dying victim utter !

A shriek that echoed from the joisted roof,
And up the stair, and further still and further
Till in some ringing chamber far aloof
It ceased its tale of murder!

Meanwhile the rusty armour rattled round.

The banner shudder'd and the ragged streamer,
All things the horrid tenor of the sound
Acknowledged with a tremor.

The antlers, where the helmet hung and belt,
Stirr'd as the tempest stirs the forest branches,
Or as the stag had trembled as he felt
The bloodhound at his haunches

The window jangled in its crumbled frame,
And thro' its many gaps of destitution
Doleous moans and hollow sighing come
Like those of dissolution.

Nohamen figne fimi.
le figne ee come.
No face loubé figne
figne fimi or open couseme.

The wood-louse dropped, and rolled into a ball.

Touch'd by some impulse occult or mechanic,

And nameless beetles ran along the wall,

In universal panic

The subtle spider, that from overhead
Hung like a spy on human guilt and error,
Suddenly turn'd and up its slender thread
Ran with a nimble terror

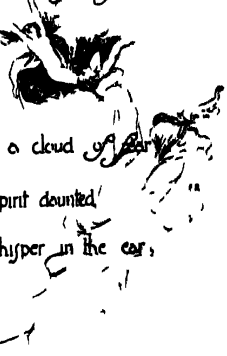

The very stains and sculptures on the wall
Assuming features solemn and terrific,
Hinted some Tragedy of that old Hall,
Lock'd up in hieroglyphic

Some tale that might, perchance, have solved the doubt,
Wherefore amongst those flags so dull and livid,
The banner of the BLOODY HAND shone out
So eminently vivid.

Some key to that inscrutable appeal
Which made the very frame of Nature quiver,
And every thrilling nerve and fibre feel
Soague-like to shiver

For ever all there hung a cloud of fear
A sense of mystery the spirit dunted
And said of plain or whisper in the ear,
The place of Hounded

If but a rat had lingered in the house,
To lure the thought into a social channel;
But not a rat remained or tiny mouse
To squeak behind the panel.

Large drops roll'd down the walls as if they wept;
And where the cricket used to chirp so shrilly,
The toad was squatting, and the lizard crept
On that damp hearth and chilly

For years no cheerful blaze had sparkled there,
Or glanced on coat of buff or knightly metal
The slug was crawling on the vacant chair
The snail upon the settle.

The floor was redolent of mould and must,
The fungus in the rotten seams had quicken'd,
While on the oaken table coats of dust
Perennially had thicken'd.

for you're charged with had my heart there

No mark of leathern jack or metal can
No cup — no horn — no hospitable token —
All social ties between that breed and Man
Had long ago been broken

There was so foul a rumour in the air,
The shadow of a presence so atrocious
No human creature could have feasted there,
Even the most ferocious

For over all these hung a cloud of fear,
(A sense of mystery the spirit doughted
And said as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is haunted!

PART. III.

It is hard for human action to account
Whether from reason or from impulse only,
But some internal prompting bade me move
The gloomy stairs and lonely

Those gloomy stairs, so dark so damp, so cold
With odours as from bones and relics carnal,
Deprived of light and consecrated mould,
The chapel vault and charnel

These gloomy stor so dark
so damp so cold.

These dreary stairs, where with the echoes die
Of every step so many echoes blended,
The mind, with dark misgivings, feared to guess
How many feet ascended

The tempest with its spoils had dusted in,

Till each unwholesome stone was darkly spotted

As thickly as the leopard's dappled skin,

With leaves that rankly rotted

The air was thick — and in the upper gloom

The bat — or something in its shape — was winging,
And on the wall, as chilly as a tomb

The Death's - Head moth was clinging

That mystic moth, which, with a sense
Of all unholy presence, augurs truly
And with a grim significance
The toper burning blue

Such omens in the place there seemed to be,
At ev'ry crooked turn, or on the landing,
The straining eyeball was prepared to see
Some Apparition standing.

For over all there hung a cloud of fear
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted.

Yet no portentous Shape the sight amazed
Each object plain, and tangible,
But from their tarnish'd fountains
And faces spectre - pollid.

Not merely with the mimic life that lies
Within the compass of Art's simulation,
Their souls were looking thro' their painted eyes
With awful speculation.

On evi'y lip a speechless horror dwelt,

On evi'y brow the burthen of affliction

The old Ancestral spirits kneel

The Rowe's malediction

Such earnest woe their features overcast,
They might have stir'd, or sigh'd or wept or spoken,
But, save the hollow meaning of the blast,
The stillness was unbroken

No other sound or stir of life was there
Except my steps in solitary clamber,
From flight to flight, from humid stair to stair,
From chamber into chamber

Dejected rooms of luxury and state,
That old magnificence had richly furnish'd
With pictures cabinets of ancient date,
And carvings gilt and burnish'd

Rich hangings, stried by the needle,

With Scripture history, or classic fable,

But all had faded, save one ragged

Where Cain was slaying Abel.

The silent waste of mildew and the moth
Had marr'd the tissue with a partial ravage,
But undecaying strown'd upon the cloth
Each feature stern and savage

The sky was pale, the cloud a thing of doubt,
Some hues were fresh, and some decay'd and duller
But still the Bloody Hand shone strongly out
With vehemence of colour!

The Bloody Hand that with a lunatic
Shone on the dusty floor, a dismal sight
Projected from the casement's opening
Where all beside was broken.

The Bloody Hand significant of crime ,
That gleams on the old heroldic banner ,
Had kept its crimson unimpaired by time
In such a wonderful manner

O'er all there hung the shadow of a fear .

A sense of mystery the spirit daunted ,

And said as plain as whisper in the

The place is Haunted !

The Death Watch tick'd behind the panell'd oak,
Inexplicable tremors shook the array,
And echoes strange and mystical awake,
The fancy to embarrass.

Prophetic hints that fill'd the soul with dread,

But thro' one gloomy entrance pointing mostly

The while some secret inspiration said,

That Chamber of the Ghostly

But thro' one
gloomy entrance

Across the door no summer stoop

Swung pendulous — no web — no dust — no hunger.

No silky chrysalis or white cocoon

About its necks and hanger.

The spider shunn'd the interdicted room,
The moth, the beetle, and the fly were banish'd,
And where the sunbeam fell athwart the gloom
The very midge had vanish'd

One lonely ray that glanced upon o' Bed,
As if with awful aim direct and certain
To show the Bloody Hand in burning red
Embroidered on the curtain.

One kindly spy that glanced up at a Bed

And yet no gory stain was on the quilt—
The pillow in its place had slowly rotted,
The floor alone retain'd the trace of guilt,
Those boards obscurely spotted.

Obscurely spotted to the door, and thence

With mazy doubles to the grated gateway

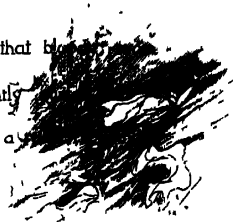

Oh what a tale they told of fear

Of horror and amazement!

What human creature in the dead of night
Had cowered like hunted hare that cruel distance?
Had sought the door, the window in his flight,
Striving for dear existence?

What shrieking Spirit in that blast
Its mortal frame had violently
Across the sunbeam, with a
A ghostly shadow flitted

Across the sunbeam, and along the wall,
But painted on the air so very dimly,
It hardly veil'd the tapestry at all,
Or portrait showing grimly

O'er all there hung the shadow of a fear,
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted.

And said, as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is haunted.

ALPHABETICAL LIST

LAWRENCE & BULLEN'S PUBLICATIONS.

ALLEN, GRANT.—SCIENCE IN ARCADY.

Crown 8vo. 5s.

"Holiday papers of a naturalist: the love of the country is in them all."—St. James' Gazette.

AMERICAN INDIAN FAIRY TALES.—Illustrated. Crown 8vo. 6s.

ANACREON.—The Greek Text, with THOMAS STANLEY'S Translation. Edited by A. H. BULLEN. Illustrated by J. R. WEGUELIN. Fcap. 4to. £1 1s. net.

ANDERSEN, HANS CHRISTIAN.—THE LITTLE MERMAID, AND OTHER STORIES. Translated by R. NISBET BAIN. With 65 Illustrations (chiefly full-page) by J. R. WEGUELIN. Royal 4to. 12s. 6d.

* Also 150 copies on hand-made paper, with the illustrations mounted on Japanese paper.

"As for Mr. J. R. Weguelin's illustrations it would scarcely be possible to over-praise them ; the pencil can do no more for Andersen than Mr. Weguelin has done for him here." - Sketch.

ANDERSEN.—LIFE OF HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN. By R. NISBET BAIN. With Portraits. Demy 8vo. 16s.

Even if Andersen had not written a single line of a single fairy tale he would still remain a tempting subject for a biographer. In practical life he was a shrewd, observant man of the world, who saw more than most people, because he took the trouble to keep his eyes open. Half his life was spent in travelling up and down Europe ; he was more or less intimately acquainted with most of the literary men of his day ; he had at his finger ends the literature of half-a-dozen languages, and he was as much at home in the prince's palace as in the peasant's hut.

BARRETT, C. R. B.—ESSEX: HIGHWAYS, BYWAYS, AND WATERWAYS. First and Second Series. Written and Illustrated by C. R. B. BARRETT. (With 18 full-page etchings, and upwards of 200 drawings.) Small 4to. 2 vols. 12s. 6d. net per volume.

"This is an excellent and original work, which shows how large a field still awaits the topographer who can wield the pen and pencil as deftly as Mr. Barrett."—Athenæum.

BARRETT, C. R. B.—THE TRINITY HOUSE
OF DEPTFORD STROND. Small 4to.
12s. 6d. net.

"The exhaustive history of the Trinity House, 'written and illustrated by Mr. Barrett, and published by Messrs. Lawrence & Bullen, is the latest, and for a long time likely to be the best, chronicle of this famous Guild. For though its deeds have already been celebrated in two other volumes, Mr. Barrett has embodied every fact of interest which the fires of 1666 and 1714 have spared, besides many which he found imbedded in that vast series of manuscript strata known as the Public Records Office." Standard.

BARRETT, C. R. B.—ILLUSTRATED GUIDES.

1. SOUTHWOLD. 6d. 2. ALDEBURGH. 6d.
3. ST. OSYTH, WIVENHOE, FINGRINGHOE, and BRIGHTLINGSEA. 6d.
4. SOUTHEND, HADLEIGH, ROCHFORD, &c. 6d.
5. IPSWICH, HARWICH, &c. 6d.
6. GREAT YARMOUTH, 6d. 7. CAISTER CASTLE, 3d.
8. ST. OSYTH PRIORY, 3d. 9. COLCHESTER, 6d.

"A very charming series of guide-books, 'Barrett's Illustrated Guides,' has been begun by Messrs. Lawrence & Bullen, on quite a novel plan. The first division of the series is devoted to the Suffolk coast, and already two numbers have been issued, delightful to handle and to look at. We feel, indeed, that this is not a guide-book, and are not ashamed to take our information from it."—Speaker.

BECKFORD, WILLIAM. — VATHEK. Edited by DR. RICHARD GARNETT. With 8 full-page Etchings by HERBERT NYE. Demy 8vo. £1 1s. net.

* 600 copies printed for England and America.

BLUE BEARD. — THE STORY OF BLUE BEARD, from the French of PERRAULT. With Pictures and Ornaments by J. E. SOUTHALL. Square 12mo. 2s. 6*d.*

BOCCACCIO, GIOVANNI. — THE DECAMERON. Translated by JOHN PAYNE. Illustrated by LOUIS CHALON. 2 vols. Imp. 8vo. £3 3s. net. (With 20 full-page Illustrations.)

BORDER BALLADS. — TWELVE BORDER BALLADS, with Twelve Etchings by C. O. MURRAY, and an Introduction by ANDREW LANG. 4to. £1 1s. net.

BULLEN, A. H. — ANTHOLOGIES.

LYRICS FROM ELIZABETHAN SONG-BOOKS.
Revised edition. Fcp. 8vo. 5s.

BULLEN, A. H.—ANTHOLOGIES.

LYRICS FROM ELIZABETHAN DRAMATISTS.

Revised edition. Fcp. 8vo. 5s

* These Anthologies are also kept in Levant Morocco, extra, £1 1s per volume net

BULLEN, A. H.—ANTIEN TROLLERIES, in Six Parts. 3s. 6d. per Part net.

* Parts I, II, and III. "Cobbe's Prophecies," "Pymlico, or Runne Redcap," and "Quips upon Questions," have appeared. Other Parts are in active preparation. The edition consists of 300 copies.

BUSBY, RICHARD.—MEMOIR OF RICHARD BUSBY, D.D., sometime Head Master of Westminster School. By G. F. R. BARKER. With Portraits and Views. Royal 4to. £1 1s. net.

* 320 copies printed (to celebrate the Busby Bicentenary, 1895).

CATULLUS.—Edited by S. G. OWEN, Senior Student of Christ Church. Illustrated by J. R. WEGUELIN. Fcp. 4to. 16s. net.

* Also 110 copies on Japanese vellum, with an additional illustration. Price £1 11s. 6d. net

CHURCHILL, CHARLES.—ROSCIAD. Edited, with an Introduction and Notes, by ROBERT W. LOWE. With Portraits. Royal 4to. £1 1s. net.

* The edition consists of 400 numbered copies.

"The edition is not only good, but magnificent."—Guardian.

COSSACK FAIRY TALES.—Translated by R. NISBET BAIN. Illustrated by ERNEST MITCHELL. Demy 8vo. 6s.

CRANE, WALTER.—CLAIMS OF DECORATIVE ART. Fcp. 4to. 7s. 6d. net.

"No one has a better right than Mr. Walter Crane to write about the Claims of Decorative Art, for he is certainly one of the best masters of decorative design whom we have had among us for many a long day. . . . The book is admirably 'got up,' and does credit to the publishers."—World.

CRESPIGNY, SIR CLAUDE CHAMPION DE.—MEMOIRS, edited by G. A. B. DEWAR. Demy 8vo, 16s.

Sir Claude de Crespigny, Bart., is one of the most versatile of living sportsmen. His steeple-chasing experiences extend over a period of nearly thirty years ; he has long been known as an intrepid balloonist, his pugilistic skill has been frequently attested, and he has accomplished some notable feats of pedestrianism.

D'AULNOY, MADAME.—FAIRY TALES. Newly Translated into English, with an Introduction by ANNE THACKERAY RITCHIE, and Illustrations by CLINTON PETERS. New Edition, with many additional Illustrations. Fcp. 4to. 7s. 6d.

"An admirable gift book for girls and boys."
National Observer

"An exceedingly pleasing Volume." — Saturday Review.

* Prospectus on application.

DAVIDSON, JOHN. — SENTENCES AND PARAGRAPHS. 18mo. 3s. 6d.

EARLE, A. M.—CHINA - COLLECTING IN AMERICA. With Illustrations. Fcp. 4to. 16s.

EDMONDS, MRS.—THE HISTORY OF A CHURCH MOUSE. A modern Greek story. Crown 8vo. 1s. 6d.

FINCK, HENRY T. — LOTOS TIME IN JAPAN. Written and Illustrated by HENRY T. FINCK. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"Brightly written and very readable." — Spectator.

FORD, JOHN.—WORKS. Edited by WILLIAM GIFFORD and Rev. ALEXANDER DYCE. Re-issued, with Additions. 3 vols. Crown 8vo. £1 1s. net.

"It is strange to think that a work of this excellence should have been lying by so many years uncalled for in the publisher's warehouse, and we welcome its resuscitation." — Athenæum.

FOUQUÉ, FRIEDRICH DE LA MOTTE.—UNDINE: A ROMANCE. Translated by EDMUND GOSSE. Illustrated by W. E. F. BRITTEN. Small 4to. 12s. 6d. net.

The success which Undine met with from the moment of its publication was extraordinary. Goethe, who found little to commend in the other writings of Fouqué, praised this warmly to Eckermann and to Holtei. He said that poor Fouqué had on this one occasion struck pure gold, and his only misfortune was that all the rest of his life he could not understand why people did not take his ordinary copper for the same gold. Heine, always so penetrating in the independence of his criticism, became entirely enthusiastic about this one work of Fouqué's, "a wonderfully lovely poem." The tale went on increasing the circle of its admirers, and before Fouqué died he had received it in English, French, Italian, and Russian translations.

GIFT, THEO.—FAIRY TALES FROM THE FAR EAST, Illustrated by O. VON GLEHN. Fcp. 4to. 5s.

GIFT, THEO.—AN ISLAND PRINCESS. A novel. 1 vol. Crown 8vo. 5s.

"A pretty picturesque little story."—Guardian.

"As sweet and true a girl as any in or out of the pages of fiction."—Academy.

JÓKAI, MAURUS.—EYES LIKE THE SEA.
A Romance. Translated from the Hungarian.
by R. NISBET BAIN. 1 vol. Crown 8vo. 6s.
[New and cheaper Edition.]

"In some respects the heroine reminds us of Becky Sharp, and in others of Manon Lescaut, and in feminine dexterity and sexual eccentricities is no unworthy mate for either."—Athenæum.

KNIGHT, JOSEPH.—THEATRICAL NOTES
(1874-1880). A contribution towards the History of the Modern English Stage. Demy
8vo. 6s.

* Also 250 large-paper copies, with portraits of eminent actors and actresses.

LINTON, W. J.—EUROPEAN REPUBLICANS.
Recollections of Mazzini and his Friends. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"The book is one that cannot be read without some amount of searching of heart, for however our range of view, our political instincts have developed since '48, it would to-day be hard to find (save perhaps among the Russian and Polish exiles) so single-minded, unselfish, and devoted a band of politicians as these men, whom Mr. Linton revered in their lives and has fitly honoured after their death."—Manchester Guardian.

LINTON, W. J.—THE FLOWER AND THE STAR, and other Stories for Children. Written and Illustrated by W. J. LINTON. Fcp. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Delightfully fresh and unaffected . . . The beautiful little woodcuts by the author form the most appropriate and expressive illustrations of such simple and pleasing stories that could be desired."—Saturday Review.

LINTON, W. J. — CATONINETALES. A Domestic Epic, by HATTIE BROWN, a young lady of colour lately deceased at the age of 14. Edited and Illustrated by W. J. LINTON. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d. net. (330 copies printed.)

"The cat in the bag, on p. 48, though small, is too terrible."—Saturday Review.

MASUCCIO.—THE NOVELLINO OF MASUCCIO. Now first translated by W. G. WATERS.

With Eighteen full-page Illustrations by E. R. HUGHES, R.W.S. 2 vols. Imperial 8vo. £3 3s. net.

 One thousand numbered copies printed. Also 210 copies on Japanese vellum, with two additional plates, £6 6s. net.*

Masuccio is commonly rated the fourth in order of time of the greater Italian novelists, his forerunners being Boccaccio, Sacchetti, and Ser Giovanni. While he falls somewhat behind all the aforesaid in elegance of style, a foremost, if not the first, place must be given him as a delineator of contemporary life and manners. The rudeness of his Italian style may arise from the fact that he wrote with a purpose in a popular strain for the people of Naples, setting before them his stories in the lingua materna. Of all the Novellieri Masuccio shows the greatest originality in the themes he illustrates; comparatively few of the fifty Novels are found elsewhere. In spite of occasional lapses into the coarseness of expression characteristic of his time, he was full of zeal for right doing. The Novellino was first published in Naples in 1476. No complete translation into a foreign language has ever before been made.

A Prospectus, with Specimen Plates, will be sent on application.

MIDDLETON, COLIN.—WITHOUT RESPECT OF PERSONS. A Novel. 1 vol. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

MISCELLANIES—Bibliographical and Historical.

THE DIALOGUS OR COMMUNYNG BETWIXT THE WYSE KING SALOMON AND MARCOLPHUS. Reproduced in facsimile by the Oxford University Press from the unique copy of the edition printed by GERARD LEEU about 1492. Edited by E GORDON DUFF. Small 4to. 10s. 6d. net. (350 copies printed.)

"Mr Duff's edition possesses in a singular degree all the qualities which are necessary to justify a facsimile reprint"—Guardian.

ANTONIO DE GUARAS; OR, THE ACCESSION OF QUEEN MARY: being the Contemporary Narrative of Antonio de Guaras, a Spanish Merchant resident in London. Edited, with an Introduction, by RICHARD GARNETT, C.B., LL.D. Sm. 4to. 10s. 6d. net. (350 copies printed.)

"On the interest and importance of the narrative itself it is needless to dwell. . . . It is equally needless to say that Dr. Garnett has discharged his functions as editor in a masterly fashion."—Times.

SEX QUAM ELEGANTISSIME EPISTOLE IMPRESSE PER WILLELMUM CAXTON ET DILIGENTER EMENDATE PER PETRUM CARMELIANUM. Reproduced in facsimile by JAMES HYATT. Edited, with a Translation, by the late GEORGE BULLEN, C.B., LL.D. Sm. 4to. 10s. 6d. net. (350 copies printed.)

"As a specimen of Caxtonian typography—and, we may add, of its artistic reproduction by means of photographic lithography—no less than on account of Dr. Bullen's exegetic labours, this reprint will be accounted curious and valuable."—Times.

• Also 200 large-paper copies.

† Other volumes of the series are in active preparation.

O'NEILL, MOIRA.—AN EASTER VACATION.

A story. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"It is full of good things; the reader may pick by the dozen out of the pages shrewd, witty, pungent, thoughtful remarks, humorous comparisons, bits of satire sly and compact, and we confidently bid him go and do it."—World.

O'NEILL, MOIRA.—THE ELF ERRANT. Illustrated by W. E. F. BRITTEN. Square 12mo.

4s. 6d.

"Wittily and pleasantly told."—Athenæum.

"A somewhat severe test was applied to this story, and it stood it triumphantly. It was read aloud in a family circle on Christmas Eve, to the pure delight alike of reader and audience. A delicate fancy, salted with rare and subtle humour, and a style full of melody, give it a place of real distinction."—Bradford Observer.

ORME, TEMPLE. — MATRICULATION
CHEMISTRY. Small 8vo. 2s. 6d.

ORME, TEMPLE.—RUDIMENTS OF CHEMISTRY. Small 8vo. 2s. 6d.

OWEN, J. A. (Editor of "On Surrey Hills," &c.)
FOREST, FIELD AND FELL. Crown 8vo.
3s. 6d.

"Without any qualification we congratulate the author upon this little volume, written with all the tenderness of her sex, and absolutely free from the intrusion of a single jarring note."—Athenæum.

PEARCE, J. H. (Author of "Esther Pentreath," &c.)
DROLLS FROM SHADOWLAND. 18mo.
3s. 6d.

"They are all clever and powerful, highly imaginative and weirdly fantastic. The tales are full of character, and excellent of their kind."—Guardian.

PEARCE, J. H.—TALES OF THE MASQUE.
18mo. 3s. 6d.

"Better work than 'Leah,' more exquisite episodes than 'A Voyage to the Golden Land,' have not been submitted to us for many a long day."—Academy.

POE, EDGAR ALLEN.—THE WORKS OF
EDGAR ALLEN POE, newly collected and edited, with a Memoir, Critical Introductions, and Notes, by EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN

and GEORGE EDWARD WOODBERRY. The Illustrations by ALBERT EDWARD STERNER, 10 vols. Crown 8vo. £2 10s. net.

* Also a few large-paper copies, with additional Illustrations by AUBREY BEARDSLEY. (Price on application.)

The first complete edition of Poe's Works. The text has been carefully revised from the Author's MSS., and material hitherto inaccessible has been placed at the Editor's service. It may confidently be predicted that this edition will not be superseded.

Contents :—The Philosophy of Rarity—A Gascon Tragedy—A Shelf of Mythology—The Pirate's Paradise—A Medley of Memoirs—With Rabelais in Rome—The Wit of History.

PRIDEAUX, MISS S. T.—HISTORICAL SKETCH OF BOOKBINDING. (With a chapter "ON STAMPED BINDINGS," by E. GORDON DUFF.) Sm. 4to. 6s. net.

* Also 120 copies (numbered) on fine paper, with two facsimiles specially prepared by Mr. Griggs. £1 1s. net.

"We propose to consider the subject as it falls naturally into three main periods: the first from 1494, when Aldus Manutius had his printing press at Venice, to the end of the 16th century. This was the period of Maioli and Grolier, of the royal bindings done for Francis I. and Henri II. The art attained almost at once its highest perfection, at all events from the point of view of design. Secondly, the 17th century, with which are associated the names of the Eves and Le Gascon. Thirdly, the 18th century, the time of Boyat, Duseuil, Nicolas, and Antoine Padeloup and the Deromes, in France, and of the Haileian style and Roger Payne in England. Any division must necessarily be somewhat arbitrary, but it happens that in this case the centuries correspond pretty definitely to the different types of the art at different periods of its development."

PYLE, HOWARD.—THE GARDEN BEHIND THE MOON. A REAL STORY OF THE MOON ANGEL. Written and Illustrated by HOWARD PYLE. Square 12mo, 7s. 6d.

On either side of the Atlantic Mr. Howard Pyle is unsurpassed as a black-and-white draughtsman, and these fanciful stories, which he has both written and illustrated, will be prized by his numerous admirers.

RABELAIS, FRANCIS. — THE WORKS OF MASTER FRANCIS RABELAIS. Translated by Sir THOMAS URQUHART, of Cromarty, and PETER ANTONY MOTTEUX. With an Introduction by ANATOLE DE MONTAIGLON. Illustrated by L. CHALON. 2 vols. Imp. 8vo. £3 3s. net.

* Prospectus, with specimen plate, will be sent on application.

The copious racy vocabulary of Urquhart's "Rabelais," the odd quirks and flourishes, the gusto and swing of the rollicking narrative, can never fail to delight liberal readers.

The publishers of the present edition claim to have dealt handsomely with Rabelais and Sir Thomas Urquhart. They invited a distinguished French artist, Mons. L. Chalon, to paint a series of oil-colour illustrations, which have been reproduced by Dujardin.

Prefixed to the translation is an essay on Rabelais (specially written for this edition) by a scholar of European reputation, the late M. Anatole de Montaiglon, whose knowledge of early French literature was certainly unsurpassed and probably unequalled. Facsimiles of rare title-pages of early French editions accompany the Introduction.

The volumes are printed by Messrs. Whittingham in the best style of the Chiswick Press.

MR. MORLEY ROBERTS' WORKS.

KING BILLY OF BALLARAT, and other
Tales. Crown 8vo. 5s.

"Mr. Roberts is a capital story-teller, with an incisive and dramatic style that is thoroughly individual."—Saturday Review.

RED EARTH. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"There is a fine flavour of vagabondage and recklessness about this book."—Athenæum.

"Vivid, terse, and dramatic."—Academy.

SONGS OF ENERGY. Square 16mo. 5s.

LAND-TRAVEL AND SEA-FARING.
With Illustrations by A. D. McCORMICK.
Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

"His plein-air vignettes of life render the truth of things with a spirit, a simplicity, and a fidelity of observation which give his book a wholesome and honest charm."—Spectator.

"The book, which is well printed and illustrated, contains much that will interest the general reader regarding various phases of Colonial life."—Journal of the Royal Colonial Institute.

"Anyone who cares to gain some knowledge of the life on a station in Australia cannot do better than read this book."—Field.

MR. MORLEY ROBERTS' WORKS—continued.

RUSSIAN FAIRY TALES.—Translated by R.
NISBET BAIN. Illustrated by C. M. GERE.
Demy 8vo. 5s. [Second edition.

"The very best fairy-book that we have seen this year
(or indeed for many years). . . . The six admirable full-page illustrations to 'Russian Fairy Tales,' by C. M.
Gere (a name quite new to us by the way), approach as near to our ideal fairy-book pictures as may be. Messrs.

Lawrence & Bullen are to be congratulated on having produced the most delightful story-book of the season."—Daily Chronicle.

† A prospectus, with Specimen Plate, will be sent on application.

"Apart from literary and historical merits, and the rare beauty of its plates, the typography and 'get-up' of this edition are all fastidious readers can desire."—Athenæum.

TOLD IN THE VERANDAH.—Passages in the Life of Colonel Bowlong, set down by his Adjutant. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [Third edition].

"The stories are so bright and readable that one can only be surprised that the modesty of the author should have caused him to send the volume forth anonymously to the public."—World.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "TOLD IN THE VERANDAH." — A BLACK PRINCE AND OTHER STORIES. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

TYNAN, KATHARINE. — A CLUSTER OF NUTS, being Sketches among my own People. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"Admirable reading, tender, restrained, and winning.

The Irish in it are not stage Irish ; they are simple and natural, and their poetry is spontaneous." National Observer.

TYNAN, KATHARINE.—THE WAY OF A MAID: a Novel. Crown 8vo. 6s.

VANBRUGH, SIR JOHN.—WORKS. Edited by W. C. WARD. 2 vo's. Demy 8vo. (With a Portrait.) £1 5s. net.

"Mr. Ward has supplied an admirable edition of Vanbrugh, to which he has contributed an able preface and useful notes. For biographical particulars he has applied to authorities not previously consulted, and he has settled some disputed points. . . . As a library edition of Vanbrugh the book is satisfactory and attractive."—Athenæum.

WALLIS, HENRY.—PERSIAN AND ORIENTAL CERAMIC ART. Parts I. and II. Folio. 14s. net.

WALPOLE, HORACE.—MEMOIRS OF THE REIGN OF KING GEORGE THE THIRD. First published by Sir DENIS LE MARCHANT, Bart., and now re-edited by G. F. RUSSELL BARKER. With Sixteen Portraits. 4 vols. Demy 8vo. £2 12s. 6d. net.

* 740 copies printed for England ; 260 for America.

† A prospectus will be sent on application.

"Though there is plenty of prejudice and temper in them, they also afford many droll and cynical glimpses of English society, and much well-informed Court gossip of that volatile but valuable kind which generally evaporates before the advent of the historian."—Standard.

WELLS, CHARLES.—STORIES AFTER NATURE. With a Preface by W. J. LINTON. Fcp. 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

* The edition consists of 400 numbered copies.
